Prevents Summary Justice on Miscreant.

police of Bayonne barely prevented a lynching to-day after the murder of thirteen-year-old Joseph Brominski, of No. 73 East Thirty-second years old, a boarder in the home of the boy's widowed mother. When the boy sought to protect his mother from the man he was backed into a corner. Then had fied, leaving bloody finger prints Foreman, standing seven feet away, fired two charges from a shotgun at he plucky youngster, blowing his head

There were two boys-Joseph, thirteen, and Frank, fifteen. Poreman has boarded in the household several months and the boys did not like him. His at-tentions to their mother anraged them. He, in turn, buted them, and often preatened to kill thom.

Shattered Victim's Head.

The first charge fired at the boy killed him, shattering his head into an indistinguishable mass. The second charge oored a hole through the side of the house as big as a man's hat. The thurderer, still in his hight clothes, ran out into the vani as men and women rushed into the street to learn what had happened. Then when and women rushed into the street to learn what had happened. Then, when the boy Frank told them that Foreman had killed his brother, a dozen men pounced upon him and bore him to the ground. Others went in with lanterns and found the slain child in the kitchen corner. Then they rushed out and raised the cry of "lynch him."

Police Rescue Slayer.

Men were stumbling about in the dark endeavoring to get at him with clubs and stones, when Policemen Bose and Pinnerty rushed up and scattered them with their clubs and revolvers Word was sent to Police Headquarters and Chief John Hore drove to the place in his patrol wagon, with all the members of his staff he could muster. The mob was still yelling for the slayer's life when he was shackled and dragged into the wagon.

Arriving at Police Headquarters, the shan denled that he had intended to kill the boy. He said that he had threatened him in fun, and that the gun had exploded accidentally. He could not account, however, for the firing of two separate charges.

The mother of the slain boy lay cowering in bed until after the man had been secured and taken to the lockup. She had not even made an outery when the boy was being murdered. Later, whe was too hysterical to talk.

Two Alleged Burglars Are Caught.

LYNCHING MOB BALKED. A series of petty burglaries kept the police of Harlem busy early to-day and they made three arrests. Police Head-Quick Arrival of Police Alone about 1:30 o'clock that thieves were in O. H. Blume's grocery, No. 5137 Broadway. Several policemen were sent from the West One Hundred and Twentyfigth-street station. They found the store had been entered through the fanlight and the cash register broken open. Only a few dollars were taken.

An hour later, taking advantage of the noise on an elevated train and trolley car as they passed, some one hurled street, by Frank Foreman, thirty-three a stone through the window at No. 1668.
